Open Internet Endowment

- Evaluated and planned for several years, now is the right time...
- Status update presented during IETF 83 Administrative and Management Plenary
- Established by the Internet Society with the support and direction of the IETF leadership
- Initial focus is IETF's long-term financial health and continued independence

Open Internet Endowment

Building on the legacy of the Internet's original pioneers and their fundamental commitments to openness, transparency, and collaboration, the Open Internet Endowment seeks to ensure that the Internet remains an open frontier that future innovators can continue to explore, expand, define, and develop responsibly for even greater social good.

IETF Campaign Committee

- Bernard Aboba
- Russ Housley
- Margaret Wasserman

This Week

- "Family Launch" of endowment begins within the IETF in keeping with culture of participation
- NOT the public launch (that will come later)
- Opportunity to be a "First Supporter"
- Opportunity to be Recognized on a Virtual Donor Wall
- For stock transfers, bequests, or recurring gifts, please e-mail:
